THE MAN IN POSSESSION

ed Mrs. Fielding, gazing at her daugh-ter with wide opened eyes. "Very extraordinary!" agreed Ethel.

"I should hope not," returned Mrs. Fielding, "what would your poor, dear father have said if, during his lifetime, a young man had come to propose for your hand, and, on being refused by your hand, and, on being refused by you, had expressed his intention of staying in the house until you accepted him? I've not even read in novels," (with a fine touch of soorn) "of such preposterous notion. Did he—did—did he seem firm about it, my dear? "Frightfully" Ethel assured her, frightfully flem, and you should just see what a chin he has. It would make three of mine!"

"What did you say?" asked Mrs. Fielding.

Pielding.

"What could I say? I've already told you everything. I met him, as you know at the Marchant-Mainwarings, and after our first introduction saw him almost every day during the following month. The night before I came home he proposed to me, and I—well, you know what I said. He then declared his intention of asking me every six months and didn't seem to care in the least when I assured him that my nawer would be just the same, however many here—in this house—till you said put in Mrs. Fielding. Ethel dal!"

Yes, Mrs. Fielding agreed that the affair would give Market Norbury a month's food for tittle tattle, if the strong arm of the law were to intervene.

"I'll see the young person myself!"
exclaimed the elder lady, majestically,
"Don't be harsh, mother," said Ethel, blushing a little, "because, after all,
you know he's-"

"Don't be harsh, mether," said Ethel, blushing a little, "because, after all, you know he's—"Head over hee's in love with you? Of course he is. If he weren't I should suspect him of having evil designs on the plate. Leave him to me, Ethel!" So saying, Mrs. Fielding swept magnificently into the drawing room.
But severs as her tone was and stern her mien, Diek Waterbury declined to budge. He apologized for the rudeness of his decision, but, nevertheless, refused to spike his guns and retro. During that he was a young man of 25, with an ample income, and a small country seat that stood sadly in need of some one to look after it.

Twenty minutes later Mrs. Fielding returned to her daughter.
"My reasoning had no effect whatever," she informed Ethel, "none whatever," I suppose he must remain. He may be in a more sensible frame of mind in the inorning. Don't let the servants know anything about the real state of things, and say his luggage will arrive in due course of time.

The result was: (1) That Mr. Richard Waterbury gained his point and stayed at Pleasant View. (2) That only his fixed determination, to wis Ethel Fielding would have led him to take such a desperate step. (3) That Ethel by no means deceived her maternal judgment, when she expressed herself indignantly about Dick and his resolution. (She let either her her her had not be such as he withinkingly). (4) That it was the general opinion in the kitchen that the gentleman who had come so suddenly without any luggage was a "man in possession." (5) That he resemed to the kitchen a very well diversed man in possession. (6) That the seculation to not in an in possession. (6) That the seculation to housemaid to post. (7) That he fired to another adventure was given to the housemaid to post. (7) That he fired to another adventure the fired to anothe seesion. (6) That the gentleman immediately sat down and wrote a long letter, which was given to the housemaid to post. (7) That he fired to unother address for some clothes. (8) That the letter was addressed to Mr. John Blunt, Friin's court, Temple. London. And (9) that in the opinion of the kitchen "Friar's court" sounded like a low place for any gentleman's friends to live in.

II.

Dick Waterbury had been with the Fieldings a week, and still showed no signs of departing from his resolution. He had soon made himself at home; he had broken the ice over the dinner table during the first night of his stay. Mrs. Fielding and her daughter had opened the ball by treating him with frigid politeness; but Dick had pretended not to gaily that he effectually dispersed the cold barier which the ladies had attempted to place between themselves and their self-invited guest.

After dinner he regaled them with comic songs, anesdates and news of the day which had failed to penetrate the and on the third day a letter, addressed to him in a bold masculine hand. He appeared to peruse the letter with much interest, and the one he wrote in reply he delivered to the housemaid with special instructions that it was to be posted in the market Norbury mail cart was dispatched. The housemaid told the cook that for a man in possession the newconer wrote a very elegant hand. The letter, too, was addressed to that low place, Friar's Court, Temple.

So, by the time Dick had been located at Picasant View seven days he was quite on friendly—nay, intimate—terms with his hostess and her daughter. Every morning when he met the latter at breakfast table (seizing an opportunity, of course, when Mrs. Fielding was not present) he had asked, "Well?" and Ethel had shaken her head very determinedly, and made the most of the exceedingly dimpled chin, which only represented one-third of Mr. Waterbury's. During the whole of that week Dick had never once been out. The kitchen commented severely on this point. It savored more of the "man in possession" than anything else he had done.

"He's been sent, and he's not to stop," was the cook's verdict. "And mistress is making the best of a bad job by "cating him as a gentleman guest. I've always understood that the poor master understand how she's lost her money. I suppose it's a mine or something. Thank goodness. I've got all my little savings wrapped up in a stocking and locked in my hox!"

Seven days had gone—the seventh night had come, and Ethel still camained obdurate. But she pald, her mother noticed, considerable attention to her toilet and wore her prettiest dresses.

room, down the passage, and rappped at her guest's door.

In almost lens time than it takes to relate it, Dick found binnelf standing at his door, in dressing gown and trousers, trying to instil some calmiess into the troubled breasts of Mrs. Fleiding, her dauchter, the cook and the housemald-for Mrs. Fleiding had arcused the servants, there being comfort in numbers, even scared ones.

"Stop here," said Dick, "I'll go down. If he doesn't use arms I can manage him!"

So saying, he moved, quietly down.

Stop here, said Dick. "I'll go down. If he doesn't use arms I can manage him!"

So saying, he moved quietly down stairs, and the women, afraid to be left by themselves. followed him as a respective distance. A few moments and the darkness had swollowed up Dick's form. An anxious interval rollowed, during which nothing could be heard. Suddenly there was a crash of crockery and a savage exclamation. Then another crash. Then a whole series of crashes. The cook and housemald shricked with fright. Mrs. Frieiding grasped the banisters and trembled. Ettel trembled, too, for Dick. Yes, for Dick. She lowed him; she knew it now. His life was in peril.

A desperate fight was going on in the passage leading to the kitchen. The women could dimly discern the forms of the two men, who, breathing in short, quick grasps were struggling furiously for the mastery. Backward and forward they swayed, with clinched teeth and straining muscles. Still the women dared not move. The couple had fought their way down to the extreme end of the door. Suddenly a pistol shot rang out, there was a cry, a spilnaring of twood, and a crash of glass, and the two vanished.

A few seconds later Dick returned, his

"Are you hurt?" she asked him, with infinite tenderness in her voice.

"Only a bruiss or two," he replied.

"I'll soon set the police on his track. But first."

Brst.—"
He took her hand in his.
"I said I would not leave the house," he began.
Ethel looked swiftly up the stairs to make sure the two were unobserved. Then she bent forward, quickly breathed "Yes" in his ear, and fled to her room.

The police never caught the burglar, who got back to Friar's Court quite safely, after catching the earliest train from a roadside station six miles from Market Norbury.

Ethel quite meant "yes," and in due time was married to the "man in possession," much to the cook and housewald's wonderment.

ecasion," much to the cook and house-maid's wonderment.

And Mr. John Blunt, reading the wed-ding announcement, chuckled softly to himself.

"It was a good idea of Dick's!" was all he said.—Tid-Bits.

EDISON'S DEBT TO HIS WIFE. Their Life Refutes the Saying that a Genius Shouldn't Marry.

Thomas A. Edison has been married

Thomas A. Edison has been married twice. Two his two wives he owes considerable of his success as the greatest living inventor and the greatest inventor that ever lived. They looked after his health and physical welfare, enabling ... in to retain that vigor without which he could not stand the strain of day after, lay in his laboratory, without a wink of sleep.

Twenty-two years ago Edison's frincess usped him to marry, thinking head domestic life would compel him to eat at least one meal a day and sleep with some regard to regularity. Edison said he had no time to court, but if come decent girl wanted to marry him he had no objections. One day while watching a young woman who was working one of his instruments and to whom he had never before snoken, he saked her, somewhat anxiously, if she wous be his wife. She said yes, and in three days they were married, though he came near forgetting the hour for the cremony, being busy on a complex machine.

Walter P. Phillips has been quoted as ing, "Aren't you going home, Tom; it's late."

"How late?" said Edison, yawping.
"About 1 o'clock," returned his friend,
"Is that so?" exclaimed Edison. "By George, I must go home. I was married this merning."

By his first marriage, Edison had three children—Thomas, William and Marion. The last two were nickramed by their father Dot and Dagh, and Dot has clung to Marion even in her days of early womanhoed. She is well educated and has spent some time in Europe.

The speculation to-day was practically monopolized by the industrial shares and the movements in some of the high priced stocks in this category were especially noteworthy. Sugar, as usual, recently, led the market in all respects and figured for over one-half of the aggregate dealirss. The railway list was practically nestected, but was mildly hregular. The general market opened a shade bigher all around and was helped by improvement in the London market and a moderate foreign inquiry for the international shares. Wool.

BOSTON—The Beston Commercial Bulletin will say to-morrow: There is a somewhat better feeling in the Boston wool market. Boston operators have been buying wool in North Dakota at 9 cents and advance of ½ cent. The Siater Woolen Company has also bought all the Hamilton wools in Texas at 8½c. The only notable sale in Boston was 500,000 pounds of old western Oregon at 9½c. There is still a very large proportion of the wool machinery of the country in idleness. The sales of the week are: 1,987,590 pounds domestic and 633,000 pounds foreign against 1,265,000 pounds domestic and 452,000 pounds domestic and 452,000 pounds domestic and 5,076,000 pounds foreign last week and 6,076,000 pounds foreign for the same week last year. The sales to date show a decrease of $2,678,073 pounds the same week last year. The sales to date show a decrease of 25,078,073 pounds domestic and 12,002,300 pounds foreign from the sales to the same date in 1895. The receipts to date show a decrease of 24,941 hales domestic and 16,507 bales foreign.

LONDON—At the sheepskin sales today the prices realized showed long wood 1/2d, medium and short 1/46/4/d higher and coarse 1/2d lower. The next sales will be held August 13 and 14.

NEW YORK-Wool quiet.

Dry Goeds.

NEW YORKS—Market is more quiet, yet there is a feeling of greater confidence and some buyers from a distance are nicking up moderate stocks of autumn goods. Prints have done well through advance purchases and large sales are recorded. Dry Goods.

Petroleum. OH, CITY—Credit balances $1 15; certificates opened, highest, lowest and closed at $1 11½; shipments 58,991 barrels; runs $5,018 bar-rels.
NEW YORK—Petroleum weak, Pennsylvania crude weak at $1 13; Ohlo crude steady at 60c.

NEW YORK—Pig fron dult, south-ern $10.504912.00; northern $11.00412.00. Copper quiet, Lend steady. Tin easier; straits $13.504/13.55; plates firm. Spetter dult.

Piles! Piles! Liching Piles!

Symptoms—Moisture: intense itching and stinging most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form, which often bleed and ulcerate, becoming very sore. SWAYNE'S OINTMENT stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the timors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.
